- If you've never experienced the Tidal Bore, head down 15 minutes before the scheduled arrival of the daytime bore. A tidal bore is a tidal phenomenon in which the leading edge of an incoming tide forms a standing wave of water that travels upstream against the current of a river or narrow bay. The tidal bore in Moncton is caused when the unparalleled tides in the Bay of Fundy begin to make their way up the historic Petitcodiac River. The Bay of Fundy is home to the highest tides in the world, and over 100 billion tonnes of water come in and out of the bay each day! Best to view at 10 Bendview Court, downtown Moncton.

- Escape to the shores of Parlee Beach

Nestled along the scenic coast of New Brunswick, this picture-perfect destination offers a slice of seaside paradise. Whether you're building sandcastles, splashing in the waves, or simply soaking up the sun, there's something for everyone to enjoy.
