Our Neighborhood Story

Our location on the site of a former train depot on Santa Fe Square puts you at the crossroads of the city's downtown cultural and dining scene.

The Blue Dome District takes its name from the old Gulf Oil station and reflects Tulsa's place in the early 20th century as the "Oil Capital of the World".

Today a series of industry buildings dating from that era have been transformed into a happening neighborhood filled with restaurants, bars, music, clubs and boutiques.
